JOHN M. PERRY CANDIDATE FOR STATE SENATOR.

His record in the legislature receives the approval of two prominent members of the present Senate.

Senator Herbert F. Baker, Weadock, Mich., says: "I shall be pleased to state to any who may inquire of me your attitude in favor of economy and business methods in the state's affairs while serving with me in the legislature." Senator Baker was speaker of the House in 1911 and is widely known as a leader in fraternal work, especially in the Grange, Gleaner and Modern Woodman societies. He is now President of the Michigan Potato Growers exchange, Cadillac, Michigan, and is always active in the interest of agriculture.

House was a good one and I am sure you would make a valuable member in the Senate. If I can do anything to help you among your former constituents I would be very glad to do so." Senator McNaughton has served in both House and Senate and from the first has been recognized as a leader always working for the best things in legislative action. He was the Father of the Warehouse amendment which sought to have the state aid in providing better marketing facilities for certain farm products. He is known for his extensive farm work, especially in the Grange, Gleaner and Modern Woodman societies. He is now President of the Michigan Potato Growers exchange, Cadillac, Michigan, and is always active in the interest of agriculture.

Mr. Perry invites examination of his record as a member of the House of 1907, 1909, and 1911, and solicits your valued support at the Primary, August 31st.

CONGRESSMAN CURRIE OPENS CAMPAIGN IN GRAYLING.

Addressed Mass Meeting at Court Yard Friday Night.

Gilbert A. Currie, congressman from the tenth district of Michigan in which is included Crawford county, was the first of any candidates to address the people during this campaign relative to issues that must be considered by the intelligent voters of this community.

Mr. Currie is a convincing speaker and gave in a fair, open-minded manner his views upon some of the matters that are uppermost in the minds of the people. We intend to mention only a couple of matters he spoke of.

YOUNG MAN MEETS WITH TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Floyd Bromwell, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bromwell of Riverview was the victim of a terrible accident Monday morning, that happened near the Riverview depot. The young man with his father and a helper were riding on the spur to their work on the section of the M. & N. E. railroad at about 9:30 o'clock. They had just started out and young Bromwell was standing up near the front of the car. As they were riding along he went to reach for something on the car and in doing so he caused a large iron bar that was on the car to fall to the track. As the car started the iron bar it tipped forward throwing the young man over the front of the car and onto the track. Mr. Bromwell endeavored to stop the car, but as they were going down grade it was impossible for him to do so.

The front wheels passed over the young man's body near his lungs and the rear wheels over his head. When he was first picked up by his father he was conscious and tried to talk to him. After a few moments he lapsed into unconsciousness, from which he did not rally until Tuesday morning at about eight o'clock. His father with aid got him onto the car and hurried him to Grayling, where he was taken to Mercy hospital. An X-ray was taken of his injuries Monday night and it was found that his jaw bone was broken at the chin. His spine was injured and some ribs broken and the right arm badly bruised. Besides these he received some bad cuts and bruises.

At first it was thought that the accident would prove fatal, but his injuries are not as bad as was first feared. At the present time he is resting nicely and getting along as well as can be expected. Mr. Bromwell has numerous friends among the young people of Grayling who will wish for him a speedy recovery. Saturday afternoon he returned from a month's vacation spent in Saginaw, Jackson and other places, and had just started to work Monday morning.

ILLINOIS FARMERS LOOK ASKANCE AT CHEAP FARM LANDS.

"They simply won't believe it!" The statement was made by an Illinois farmer who had come into Northeastern Michigan and after a rather complete investigation of farm lands had bought 200 acres in Isosco County at a price which was not much more than one tenth of what a similar farm would have cost him in his home county. "Our Illinois farmers are used to paying $300 to $400 an acre for land and when anybody tells them that good farms in Northeastern Michigan can be bought at from $30 to $50 an acre and farms equipped with the very best of buildings for less than $100 an acre, they are suspicious at once and insist that there is something wrong with the land or it wouldn't sell so cheap."

There are farm lands in the vicinity of my home which rent for as much as $30 an acre to farming families, which use them for growing sweet corn, and they can't grow a bit better corn than I have seen right here in Michigan," he said, during a call at the Development Bureau office. This man has been renting a farm in Illinois, but his farm belongs to an estate and it is to be sold next spring. "He said it would bring at least $400 an acre. 'I have been on it,' he said, 'but I couldn't afford to buy it and so I came into Michigan on a prospecting tour and I am going to move my family here in the fall. I am also going to try to get the truth about Northeastern Michigan land into the heads of some of my neighbors and hope to see a number of them up here after the harvest this year.'"

RESORT FACILITIES ARE IN BIG DEMAND.

The advertising of Northeastern Michigan as a summer resort proposition—the playground of the nation—which has been carried on this year by the East Michigan Travel and Resort association, and the Northeastern Michigan Development bureau, has been so successful that hotel and resort owners who had listed their accommodations with the secretary of the Development bureau are all filled up until well into August and the secretary is receiving many inquiries from tourists asking for accommodations of all sorts, from hotels to cottages, lodges in the woods, etc., to which he is unable to reply satisfactorily.

"These inquiries come from all over the country," said the secretary, "and from people who have never before been into Michigan. Some want fishing, and aren't particular how they get it, others want the very best of accommodations. Some want well furnished cottages and high-class service and others will be satisfied with anything that assures them of reasonable comfort and quiet enjoyment. If there are any resort owners or others whose accommodations are not already engaged for August and they will write the Northeastern Michigan development bureau at Bay City, describing what they have, I will be glad to pass that information on to the people who are sending their inquiries to me."

NOTICE

I will give $25.00 reward for information which will lead to the conviction of the person or persons who took from my cottage near Lovells at some time or times since the fall of 1919 certain silverware, blankets and other articles. Information may be given to me or to Geo. L. Alexander at Grayling, Mich. Wm. B. Marston.

SCHOOL DAYS

Saturday when about 200 former commissioned officers of the old Michigan guard will hold a two day encampment there.

The meeting is for the purpose of discussing means and ways for re-establishing the organization in this state. Notices were sent out by Adj. Gen. Bersey of the State military board to all former officers of the organization requesting that they attend the encampment.

Major LeRoy Pearson, quartermaster general, has been here for several days getting ready to receive the officers when they arrive and by the

One is his opinion of the cause of the high cost of living. This he claimed was due to the under-production of supplies. He claimed that the Department of Justice and the government in its effort at price fixing had utterly failed to remedy the trouble. His idea was that the only solution possible would be the natural law of "supply and demand." "Just as soon as the supply was greater than the demand," said he, "prices will drop." He advocated an eight hour day with honest service and a wage that is fair to the working man and employer alike.

Another of the big subjects he touched upon was the "Plumb Plan" for the administration of railroads. He said that he was opposed to the idea. It would take several columns of space to tell all the features of the Plumb plan but we will here mention a few ideas brot up by Mr. Currie. The plan is for the government to purchase the railroads of the country the price amounting to twenty billions of dollars. Mr. Currie stated that the interest alone on such an investment would amount annually to double the cost of running our government any one year prior to the year 1915, and is a burden that the people cannot afford to carry. Under the plumb plan the roads would be run by a commission of 15 men, five of whom are elected by the railroad employees, five by the executive officers of the roads, and five appointed by the president of the United States. This he claimed would give the railroad men absolute power to regulate wages, working hours and all other matters pertaining to the administration of the roads, and place them in a position to dominate over every industry depending upon railroad transportation. This, he claimed, would eventually lead to similar operation of all public industries, and pointed to Russia as a country under such control, and would work hardship eventually to the very ones who were now in favor of it, just as the peasants of Russia, he said, are now under this yoke that they would gladly shake off. There the government owns and controls everything and even the small farmer cannot own his own lands but it is always subservient to the wills of the rulers—right or wrong.

It is well known that Grayling is made up of a large number of railroad men and that they look at the Plumb plan in a different light. They seem to be almost solidly in favor of it. We have the utmost confidence in them and are sure that whatever may be their ideas on this matter that they take their stand with an honest conviction that they are right.

Mr. Currie says that organized labor is opposed to him and that President Samuel Gompers, of the federation of labor, has slated him for defeat in the election at the coming primaries. We sincerely trust that we have not misquoted Mr. Currie in this report, and don't believe we have, but if we have done so, we will be glad to stand corrected.

Specific-Logical-Efficient

Since from a physical point of view—vertebral sub-luxations (misplacements) are the underlying cause of by far the majority of all diseases, vertebral adjustments becomes the most LOGICAL and EFFICIENT REMEDY.

It occupies this distinguished position in the healing art because it operates in COMPLETE HARMONY with the most patent and dominating fact of Therapeutics—a fact to which all HEALTH agencies give assent in theory but which the majority of them deny in practice. This fact is that in every case nature does all the curing, all the physician can do is to assist nature by removing the obstacles which interfere with her curative process.

Chiropractic is today more SPECIFIC, logical and efficient in its application than any other known Therapeutic system because it removes the underlying cause of disease.

FIVE MINUTE CHATS ABOUT OUR PRESIDENTS

By JAMES MORGAN

A DIPLOMAT AT 14

1787—July 11, John Quincy Adams born in Braintree, now a part of Quincy, Mass.
1781—Secretary of Legation at St. Petersburg.
1787—Graduated at Harvard.
1790—Admitted to the Bar.
1794—Minister to The Hague.
1797—Married Louise Catherine Johnson.
1797-1801—Minister to Prussia.
1802—In Massachusetts Senate.
1803-8—In National Senate.
1809-14—Minister to Russia.
1814—Peace Commissioner at Ghent.
1815-17—Minister to England.
1817-25—Secretary of State.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

1825—John Quincy Adams inaugurated sixth president, aged fifty-seven.
1830-48—In congress.
1831—Presented first petition against slavery.
1848—February 23, death of Adams at the capitol.
Aged eighty.

THE chieftainship of every great nation still passed from father to son until the presidency of the United States was created, when the first free-for-all race and an even start for the highest prize was opened to the sons of men regardless of the accidents of birth.

Even John Quincy Adams did not win the race, but was outrun at the polls by Andrew Jackson, the son of an immigrant. Political parties bawling disappeared in 1824, four men entered the contest and deadlocked the electoral college, which left the house of representatives to choose from among the three highest candidates. This climaxed the fourth man—Henry Clay—who added in the election of Adams and who received from the new president the appointment of secretary of state.

The only non-partisan administration the country ever has had was not a shining example of success. Uncompromising, alone, John Quincy Adams stalked his solitary way, never once turning to the right or to the left from the strait and narrow path of independence. With no sense of humor to relieve his sense of self-righteousness, to light up his view of his fellows or to thaw his own icy virtues, it was impossible for his supporters to feel any enthusiasm for him.

John Quincy Adams led the simple life in the White House. Getting up at 5, he built his fire, read his daily portion of the Bible and while the government clerks still slept, he took his walk or swim.

John Quincy Adams alone has solved the problem of ex-presidents. He forgot that he had been president at all and went to work like any other citizen.

With his houses in Quincy and Boston mortgaged and the income from his estate too slender for the support of his family, John Quincy Adams heard the bark of the wolf at his door as in his gloomy fancy he closed it upon public life in his sixty-second year. When some neighbors ventured to ask the next year if it would be beneath his dignity to represent the old Plymouth Rock district in congress, this great American, who had been a senator, a minister at the courts of The Hague, Berlin, St. Petersburg and London, a secretary of state and a president, replied that he was not above serving the people as one of the selectmen of his town.

Washington was aghast at the sight of an ex-president taking his seat in the hurly-burly of the lower house only two years after leaving the White House. Without joining the nearly every great event in the history of the nation until the close of the Mexican war.

With John Adams in congress the child had to be the man of the family, and at nine he regularly rode his horse to Boston to fetch the mail. At ten his father took him with him on his mission to France.

At fourteen, an American minister appointed the "mature youngster" his secretary of legation. By seventeen, the youth had traveled over much of Europe, and he came home to enter Harvard. After graduation, he opened a law office in Boston. But business was only beginning when the young attorney was appointed by Washington, minister at The Hague, where the government to which he was accredited died before the armies of France and left him in the midst of the triumphant revolutionists. Meeting the daughter of the American consul in London, a Marylander, she and the young diplomat were married on the eve of his departure for Berlin, to which capital he had been promoted.

Among his last acts as president, John Adams removed his son from office to deprive Jefferson of the malicious satisfaction of dismissing him. When the recalled diplomat was elected to the senate he displayed his family trait of independence by taking sides with his father's hated rival and supporting the Jefferson administration.

The infuriated federalists of Massachusetts savagely turned upon him as a traitor to his party and a renegade from his class. They drove him from the senate, and when he came home he found himself in his Boston house, which stood where the Hotel Touraine now stands, a social outcast.

With his name erased forever from the Boston blue book, John Quincy Adams was no longer a gentleman, and the Jeffersonians, who were not gentlemen, but only Democrats, took him up. By their favor he became minister to Russia, a negotiator of the peace of Ghent in 1814, and minister to England.

From London, John Quincy Adams was called home to be secretary of state in the Monroe administration. In that post he played the leading part in shaping the Monroe doctrine.

In his retirement John Adams had watched with fond admiration the rise of John Quincy until he was only one rung from the top. Although, in his crabbedness, he complained that "my son will never get a chance at the presidency until the last Virginian is in his grave," fortune agreeably surprised the aged ex-president in next to the last of his ninety years, when he saw the scepter of the republic pass to a lineal hand.

John Quincy Adams.

Democrats or the Whigs, with no faction about him, John Quincy Adams faced alone the Jackson administration which had supplanted his own and alone he met the swarms of his old-time critics on a level. Under his incessant pounding, the majority against the right of petition fell session by session until it disappeared entirely in 1844. He had won his long fight against the gag rule.

His life was crowned. His work was done. Still he labored on. Although he fell in a Boston street under a stroke of paralysis, he insisted upon returning to his duties in congress, where the members stood as he entered the hall and cheered him on his way to his seat. A year afterward, as he seemed, about to rise to address the speaker, he suddenly pitched forward upon the floor.

The veteran had been mortally stricken on the field. Although he lingered two days, he was not removed from the capitol, but remained in a little room off the old hall of the house. There, still at his post, died this old and devoted servant of his country.

Summer's Gay Valedictories

AFTER a summer that has proved to be the background for a panorama of colorful frocks, mildly gay and alluringly beautiful as most of them are, one might expect a farewell that forgets to be bright. But new arrivals for late summer are not at all sedate. The all-white frock and white with a little black introduced make their usual and expected entry but not to the exclusion of color. Yellow in many beautiful tones, including pumpkin and chamomile and many shades between, is favored in beguiling little dresses for late summer and with them girdles of black ribbon and other touches of black, seem placed to better advantage than ever. This touch of black belongs to yellow and the usual white finish at neck and sleeves merely adds to its beauty.

Some women prefer sheer silk materials for their summer finery and late summer models are presented in crepe-de-chine and georgette as well as in sheer cottons. Examples of both silk and cotton appear side by side above in two late arrivals. At the left an organdie in light yellow is shown and it would be successful in any color. These dresses reveal once more that there continues a choice between the slim silhouette and bouffant skirts. The organdie chooses the latter, achieving this style by means of tiers of narrow dounces set on at each side of a somewhat full skirt. The bodice has a deep yoke and elbow sleeves cut kimono style, with its low part joined to them with hemstitching. Points of lace, set in at the front and back redeem its utter simplicity with an interesting detail. The sleeves are finished with a narrow hemstitch and hem and organdie makes the girle.

Light pink georgette lends its abiding charm to the soft, summery frock at the right and narrow tucks with bands of open work make its very simple and very effective decoration. It is made with a tunic, which accounts perhaps for its normal waist line in crepe-de-chine and georgette as well as in sheer cottons. Examples of both silk and cotton appear side by side above in two late arrivals. At the left an organdie in light yellow is shown and it would be successful in any color. These dresses reveal once more that there continues a choice between the slim silhouette and bouffant skirts. ## Last Word in Summer Frocks

THE story of summer frocks draws toward its close and it has been an intricate and much-embroidered tale. Will this furor for embroideries hold over in fall styles or will it give place to some other forms of elaboration or will we return to the simple life and affect plain frocks? No one except the powers that design behind the scenes is able to make a guess, but here is a late summer gown without a vestige of embroidery on it. All that is left of the endlessly ingenious stitchery that has adorned everything this summer, is a mere trace of it in five rows of stitching at the bottom of a very long smock—or is it a coat.

But the model shown above is a late summer dress—not even a straw in the wind for autumn. It is a pretty affair in a soft silk, maybe crepe-de-chine or something equally supple having a plain and comfortably wide skirt with a four-inch hem banded with a group of four narrow tucks. The interesting things about the overgarment are the platted skirt of it set onto a plain bodice three inches—and more at the front—above the waist line, and the odd new sleeves. These are elbow length with a flounce set on at the back under a strap of heavy satin ribbon finished with a buckle. There is a narrow girle made of the ribbon and fastening with a buckle at the front and a sailor collar of satin, the combination being just what one would expect in July and August, a happy union of black and white with the black playing a minor role.

The hat reverses this order of things, being of black cre with white satin facing. It has an unpretentious pattern in white yarn applied to the crown and a small flat tassel of yarn at the side.

For Parasols.
Embroidered ratine is a smart fabric for parasols these days.

Wear Russian Turbans in Paris.
Russian turbans covered with glittering jet and trimmed with trails of tiny flowers are to be seen everywhere in Paris; also bowli toques made of dyed grass, with paradise plumes jutting out at one side, the tips resting on the shoulder. The small hat or close-fitting toque has had it all its own way, but for the hot summer days the genuine picture hat will take its place. This year bright colors are the vogue; red, in every possible shade, and blue; leaf-green, embroidered in black and silver for turban toques, or violet mingled with dull pink and tete de negre.

For Lingerie Sets.
Lingerie sets of white and colored voile in tailor finish with hemstitched hems and seams is the newest in fine French underwear. Some few sets have a tiny touch of hand-embroidery done in dainty floral motifs in white and colors. Some white sets have the wide hemstitched hems run through with colored ribbons.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

THE COYOTES.

"I was brought up in such a nice petted way," said Charlie Coyote.

"What was that?" asked Clemmons Coyote.

"And what do you mean when you say you were brought up in such a nice petted way? I am afraid I do not understand," he added.

"You see," said Charlie, "I was very young and very delicate when I was young."

"My dear Charlie," said Clemmons, "of course you were very young when you were young! You couldn't have been old when you were young."

"Well," said Charlie, "I mean that I showed my age, or my lack of age then. I showed that I was a young and delicate thing."

"Most creatures do show their lack of age," grinned Clemmons. "When a creature is young it usually looks young."

"Oh, very well," said Charlie.

"But you don't stop your story," said Clemmons. "I do not mean to interrupt you, though I know that is what I have been doing. I just enjoy a little fun, a little fun," and the coyote laughed hard.

"Yes," he continued, "pray tell me your story. Tell me about the nice petted way in which you were brought up. Was it here in the zoo that you were brought up in this way?"

"Yes," said Charlie, "I was brought here when I was very young—so young that I had no age at all worth mentioning! I was brought up on a bottle just like a baby. How I did love that bottle."

"That is to say it wasn't the bottle itself I liked so much. I am not and never will be a glass eater and the bottle was made of glass."

"But what I liked was the stuff they put in the bottle—delicious milk. It was warmed just a little for me and it soothed me and made me feel happy and pleased."

"And I was petted with love pats. A love pat is a nice pat which is gentle and affectionate. One can always tell a love pat. They're very nice things, very nice indeed."

"And the keeper loved me and I became very tame and we were great friends. He called me his little tame coyote friend and told folks how he had brought me up."

"He said that he had fed me on a nice bottle and that I had been very delicate when I was young. He had been afraid at one time that I wouldn't live. And he was worried about me."

"I was pleased when I heard that. Not because I wanted the keeper to worry, or that I was glad because he had worried."

"I just felt a little bit pleased that he had cared so much whether I had lived or died. That is a nice thing for a coyote to feel; that with all the animals in the zoo I too was wanted."

"And wanted so much, too, that I was fed what would agree with me and help me and make me strong."

"Do you think I look like a nice strong coyote? I feel strong—as strong as though I had never been delicate. That is what good care and love and affection will do for one."

"You look in perfect condition," said Clemmons Coyote. "Your brown and gray fur is perfect with its touches of reddish color. Your sharp nose and pointed ears and keen, bright eyes are all that they should be. You're a fine-looking coyote and strong too."

"And I feel sure that you would tackle anything and be a good fighter for your wants and for your needs if there were lots of us around."

"You would be sensible like other coyotes and not fight by yourself. They say we're cowardly alone and brave when there are lots of us. It is true—we do like to work together when there has to be fighting."

"All of what you say is true," said Charlie. "But here I only think of love and affection and of such things, for I am tame."

"And those are the only things I think of," said Clemmons, "for you know I, too, am very tame."

"I know you are," said Charlie. "Yes, the keeper saved my life, and I love him. That's the coyote's thanks for all he did. Yes, love for the keeper is the thank-you of Mr. Charlie Coyote."

Small Girl Feared She Had Somewhat Overdone Matter of Praying for Baby Brother.

The little girl came home to her mamma very much disturbed because little Susie, her neighbor, had a new baby brother to play with, while she, herself, was very lonely. Her mother comforted her and told her to ask God to send her a little brother, too. So the child began to pray for a little brother, and occasionally got impatient but her mother told her to keep on praying and perhaps her prayer would be answered some day.

One day she was called into the mother's room, and her delight knew no bounds when the nurse took a wee thing up from the mother's side and laid it in her arms. But a moment later, when the nurse picked up another bit of humanity, the child almost dropped the one she was holding, and a startled expression came into her face as she said:

"Oh, mamma! Is God going to answer all those prayers that I prayed?"

At That, Marine Showed Praise-worthy Willingness to Obey Orders Captain Had Given Him.

Army water carts differ from one another about the same as, say, one egg differs from another egg—namely, in size. The number of gallons which each car can contain, is therefore, stoncelled on the top of it.

The captain of a marine supply company in France was inventorying his carts and totalling the figures.

"Wilkins," he called to an idle private who hadn't had the sense to get out of the way, "get me the capacity of this cart."

The captain ran his pencil down the column of figures for several seconds, keeping one ear open for the result of Wilkins' research.

But no reply came from Wilkins. The captain glanced up to find all of Wilkins except the head protruding from the hole in top of the water cart. A desperate struggle with some unseen monster seemed to be going on inside the cart. Finally Wilkins' baffled head emerged.

"I felt all around the blamed thing," he explained, "and I'll be hanged if I can locate that capacity anywhere."—Home Sector.

THE "JUST A LITTLE LATE CLUB"

Some men lose five minutes early in life and never find it again.

—Bruce Barton.

I like to reach the station a few minutes early in the afternoon, and watch the commuters running for the trains.

I have been watching them now for almost two years, and I know a lot of them by sight.

There are ladies and old men, infrequent visitors to the city, unused to business, who arrive long before train-time.

There are the regular business men, who arrive one minute ahead.

And—just as the gate is about to slam—there comes piling across the station, breathless, coatails flying, the members of the Just a Little Late Club.

I used to sympathize with them at first, supposing them to be unfortunate who had missed a car or lost their watches.

But after almost two years of watching I know different.

The membership of the Just a Little Late Club does not change appreciably from day to day. Night after night it is the very same crowd of men who have to run the last few blocks for the train.

Membership in the Just a Little Late Club is not a misfortune; it is a habit. And one of the most exasperating habits in the world.

Napoleon said, "I beat the Austrians because they did not know the value of five minutes."

He beat the Austrians, but he did not exterminate them. Thousands of their descendants and relatives still wave—still with not appreciation of the value of time; still a nuisance in the business world.

There should be some way of marking them. They should be compelled to wear a button or a distinctive uniform of some sort, so that the man who makes an appointment with one of them might be protected against taking the appointment too seriously. "Never be on time," said Mark Twain. "You waste too much time waiting for the other fellow."

He had in mind the enormous membership of the Just a Little Late Club.

I was lunching the other day in a hotel with a man who has much more money than I have. And a man passed us who has much more than both of us put together.

He is a captain of other people's industry as well as of his own. He began work twenty years ago as an office-boy, and today heads one of the great manufacturing concerns of his city.

"A wonderful fellow," said my friend, pointing to him. "Last year I had a long series of negotiations with him about the formation of a new company. It was necessary for us to meet practically every day for nearly three months. In all that time he was never late but twice, and then only for a few minutes. And each time he sent word to me from his office telling me that he would be late."

J. P. Morgan figured that every hour of his time was worth $1,000, and he had no patience with men who were late for appointments, or who, when they came to see him, did not give him his money's worth in exchange for the time they took.

"It is not necessary for me to live," said Pompey, "but it is necessary that I be at a certain point at a certain time."

And Lord Nelson said, "I owe all my success in life to having been a quarter of an hour before my time."

I hold up the record of these famous men, in the faint hope that it may do some good.

And yet, the hope is very faint. The habit of unpunctuality is so very tenacious, so difficult to break.

If I am fortunate enough to be inside when the pearly gates are closed on the judgment-day, I shall know what to expect.

Five minutes later there will be a terrific battering on the gate. St. Peter may be surprised, but I shall not be.

When the gates swing open again, there they will be—some of the most lovable and exasperating people who ever lived—the members of the Just a Little Late Club—panting, apologetic, explanatory to the last.

GAMES AND FUN FOR EVERYBODY.

"Games and play for school morales"—a course in graded games for school and community recreation, arranged by Mel Sheppard and Anna Vaughan, issued by the Michigan Community Council commission, One Perkins Building, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

How to play and what to play is told in this manual on recreation just received from the Michigan Community Council commission. This special publication covers games for all ages, and though intended primarily for schools, will be valuable wherever either children or adults gather together for relaxation and entertainment.

A message to recreation leaders, a brief analysis of the rules for those presenting the games and suggestions for leaders, is followed by a series of games listed by ages from the first or kindergarten room to adults. In the last pages is a description of "The Little Wonder Box," an athletic outfit which deserves a special story but which, briefly, offers material for the equipment of a school playground, or a vacant lot, at a cost so small, that any group of boys or girls who really want it can earn it themselves. On the back of the booklet is a list of pertinent questions to encourage thinking:

"Are you doing your part to provide adequate playgrounds for the children of your neighborhood?"

"Are you helping to make your schools centers for community play, education and recreation?"

"Are you helping to make good Americans by making friends of the foreign born in your neighborhood?"

"Are you doing your part to strengthen the agencies of your community in the effort to develop leisure time activities?"

On the inside of the cover the reason for the existence of the Michigan Community Council is set forth. The commission was created under the Baker bill, known as Senate Enrolled Act No. 84, which was the direct outcome of a conference of representative members of state, county and community war boards called at Lansing by Governor Sleeper in Mar. 1919.

With a deep appreciation of the splendid results attained by communities working together in times of war, the Baker bill was framed to conserve that power and foster the kind of cooperation and team work in dealing with peace time problems which proved so effective in solving problems of war times.

In the operation of the law it is recognized that each community has its own special problems for which it must provide its own solution. To help in this work Senate Enrolled Act No. 84 was enacted, creating a state commission and county boards, with power to foster the organization of community councils wherever there was need of such organizations.

This method of community work is not the building of an outside organization, seeking either to rival or duplicate work already being done. It is rather the people banding themselves together to secure larger and better results in supplying the common needs of a community through a more complete co-operation between all existing community agencies.

The bill specifically states that a community council shall consist of all eligible organizations in a certain designated territory, whether township, village, or city, which may desire to affiliate with the county community board and state commission. Its purpose may be any community work from the making of good roads to the providing of special playgrounds for young and old, or the gathering together of the people of the community for a special evening of singing or games.

Dr. Winship, editor of the Journal of Education, sums up the value of the manual in brief foreword in which he states that the opportunity for supervised recreation did much to keep up the morale of our army. The lack of such opportunity he declared was part of the reason for the breaking down of the morale of the German army. He says:

"This book will lead to school morale without diverting attention from school life; without placing any strain on the teacher; without causing any loss of time from intellectual development while safety first morale for all the children of all the people."

The state commission has issued the book believing that it will do much to provide safety morale for communities of older people as well and help solve the needs of the small towns and rural districts especially, by providing suggestions for better recreational facilities.

SCORES OF PEOPLE TO MAKE N. E. MICH. TOUR.

Scores of farmers and their families are going to make an automobile camping tour along the East Michigan pike—a part of the Dixie highway—the second week in August. They will come from all parts of southern Michigan and will meet at Bay City on August 8, where they will be entertained at dinner by the Board of Commerce, given entertainment at Wenona beach in the evening, with its swimming, dancing and other amusements. They will camp out at the beach for the night and get an early start for the north in the morning. Numerous towns along the route are planning some sort of an entertainment for the tourists, who will go as far as Mackinaw City, where they will meet a similar touring party which will travel up the West Michigan pike, and all will travel up the West Michigan pike, and all will unite in a big farm gathering. Both parties will break up there, the individual members returning to their homes by any route they desire.

Officials of the Northeastern Michigan development bureau will have charge of the tour up the east shore; it is planned to provide tents, camping outfits and other service of a nature somewhat similar to that being used by the Michigan Pikers association now on its annual trip, which is through Ontario to the Soo and back by the way of Mackinaw and the East Michigan pike. Eighty farmers have already announced their intention of making the East Michigan trip.

Edd. Glashaw of Art River, near Morand, arrived at the Tuttle Swedish Bath house at Cheboygan Wednesday, July 14. He had been suffering from a severe case of sciatic rheumatism for several weeks. For three weeks, night and day, he has been crying with severe pains without a minute sleep. All those who saw him said he would lose his mind. He became so helpless that he had to be carried about on a cot. After the second treatment he was much relieved and he was able to sleep several hours. This week he is able to walk with crutches and he is free from sharp pains. Adv.

GRAYLING LOSES FIRST GAME TO GAYLORD 5-11.

Threatening Rain Kept Many Away From Game.

Base Ball, the sport that is so relished by Grayling fans has again been revived. The first game of the season was played last Sunday afternoon on the home field when Gaylord defeated Grayling by a score of 11 to 5. The same old-time enthusiasm prevailed thruout the game. The home boys had only practiced a couple of evenings last week, and some of the players hadn't handled a ball this season, so they were not fit for a contest. The Gaylord team was made up of some pretty fair players. The following were in the line-up for Grayling: Colburn, Charleifur, L. F.; Rolla Hull, C. F.; Roy Milnes, 1st B.; Wilfred Laurant, S. S.; Carl Doroh, 3rd B.; Claude Cardinal, R. F.; Clarence Johnson, P.; Ervin Dodge, 2nd B.; Herbert Wolf, C.; Joe Gildner, substitute.

As the weather was cold and rainy there was not as large a crowd out as was expected. Ben Landsberg, manager is trying to secure games with other teams and our boys no doubt will make a fine showing in the future, for they are practicing up every evening. It is expected that there will be a game next Sunday, it is not certain enough to announce it at this time.

Peace

F. GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

IF YOU would look into the face of a strong man, search out him who is at Peace with himself. For it is during the time of Peace, both in the life of an individual and a Nation the growth and power accumulate.

Live in Peace. Peace is always constructive. For where there is mutual co-operation between every one of your faculties, there is team work. And team work means that you get the biggest results from your combined efforts.

Live in Peace. Live in Peace with all about you. Where there is no Peace, there is no happiness and no time for taking up the things that count for the most. We are greatly influenced and inspired by the lives of people with whom we come in contact most. And if there is continual Peace among all, there is sure to be continual helpfulness among all.

Live in Peace. Keep your mind in Peace. For the Mind houses the "Headquarters Staff" from which all the important orders in the game of Life proceed. Peace originates in the Mind. Let Peace rule your great Nervous System. Let Peace guide your day. For out from its application comes Power and Plenty.

Live in Peace.

July is just in the nick of time—Hot weather, hot weather! The midsummer month is the golden prime for haycocks smelling clover and thyme: Swing all together!

July is just in the nick of time.

—Myron Denton.

Seasonable Dishes. When the family enjoys a few putty doughnuts try this simple recipe which makes a dozen and a half the size of an egg:

Drop Doughnuts. Take one-half cupful each of sugar and milk, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one egg and one teaspoonful of baking powder, salt, ginger and grated lemon rind. Beat the egg white, add the sugar gradually, then the beaten yolk, a grating of lemon rind, a pinch of ginger and a quarter of teaspoonful of salt, milk and flour sifted with the baking powder. Drop by teaspoonfuls into hot fat and roll in powdered sugar.

Egg and Sardine Salad. Cook three eggs until hard, cut in two lengthwise and remove the yolks. Rub the yolks through a sieve with four sardines, season with salt, pepper and add enough cream or oil to make a paste. Shape into balls. Shred the whites of the eggs with a sharp knife and mix twice the quantity of finely cut celery. Arrange on a nest of lettuce and drop the balls of egg paste upon the salad. Serve with mayonnaise.

Normandy Salad. Cut three cucumbers and three hard-cooked eggs in dice, add a cupful of minced olive, half a cupful of pecans or walnut meats broken in bits and mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce.

Coffee Blanc Manger. Take two cupfuls each of coffee and milk. Add four tablespoonfuls of corn starch, four tablespoonfuls of sugar to a little of the cold milk. Cook until it thickens, then pour into a wet mold and chill. Serve with whipped cream.

Celery and Pineapple Salad. Use equal parts of celery and pineapple, cut fine. Sprinkle with French dressing and chill. When ready to serve add a few pounded almonds to a mayonnaise dressing and serve garnished with shredded almonds on lettuce.

Egg and Cheese Salad. Slice half a dozen hard-cooked eggs, line a salad dish with lettuce and arrange a layer of eggs on the lettuce, then sprinkle thickly with grated cheese. Add cream to mayonnaise and spread a layer over the cheese, then a finely minced cucumber and the remainder of the eggs. Cover with mayonnaise and sprinkle with cheese. Serve cold.

Watermarks in Paper. Watermarks in paper have been used from the earliest times. John Tate, papermaker of Stevedage, in 1644 used an eight-petaled flower for his watermark.

Last Night's Dreams

—What They Mean

DID YOU DREAM ABOUT GOATS?

Freud states that modern dream books are but plagiarisms of ancient Eastern writings of the same character and are necessarily bad ones because in nearly all cases the Eastern interpretations of dreams hung upon a play upon words which is, of course, lost in turning them into another language. This statement may be open to doubt and it is rather probable that the modern empiric interpretation of dreams has gradually grown up through a mingling of Teutonic, Celtic, Gallic and ancient Roman and Greek superstitions, which would account for the divergence of the interpretations with regard to their symbolism.

The most famous dream prophecy depending upon a play upon words is that given by the soothsayer, Aristandros, to Alexander when that monarch was besieging Tyre. Alexander was much disturbed by the stubborn resistance of the city and the consequent delay in his plans of conquest. One night he dreamed that he saw one of those gontlike mythological creatures, a satyr—Greek Satyros—dancing on his shield. He demanded of Aristandros the meaning of the dream. At once the soothsayer replied by dividing the word into Sa Tyros (Tyre) Thine is Tyre. Alexander took the city.

Although Freud cites this as an example of his statement it will be noticed that the play upon words was Greek and not Oriental. Satyrs were of the male sex and had the horns, tail and legs of goats. They were mischievous creatures and sent the nightmare. To meet them or dream of them was accounted by the ancients as unlucky. In spite of the dream of Alexander. This would seem to account for the dictum of the modern mystics that to dream of a billy goat is unlucky, though to dream of killing one or seeing one killed is a favorable omen; the latter probably originating from the killing of a goat as a sin offering mentioned in Leviticus. And the interpretation of a dream of seeing only the goat's horns—that it foretells bad luck—is easily traced to the prophet's dream of the fight between the goat and the ram in the eighth chapter of Daniel. A few of the empirics say that to dream of nanny-goats, especially if white, is good luck.

Mother's Cook Book

Upon the shoulders of the past we stand, And to the future turn our questioning eyes.

What doth she hold in store, what precious prize, what future hope, that we may wrest from out her close-shut hand?

Ham Balls. Take three-fourths of a cupful of minced ham, two cupfuls of mashed potatoes, one tablespoonful of melted butter, two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of rich milk, and pepper to taste. Beat the potatoes until very light. Mix the ham with the potatoes, add butter, eggs and milk. Form into balls and fry in a little fat in a frying pan.

Prune and Pineapple Marmalade. Take one pound of washed, soaked and steamed prunes. Remove the stones and put through a meat chopper, add two cupfuls of pineapple (grated), one cupful of sugar, a little salt. Cook very slowly until thick, stirring often.

Baked Bananas. Remove the skins from four bananas, cut in halves lengthwise. Put in a shallow pan. Mix together one tablespoonful of melted butter, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a dash of salt and one and one-half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Pour half the mixture over the bananas and bake in a slow oven. Baste during the baking with the remainder of the mixture.

Combination Marmalade. Take half a dozen oranges, half a pound of carrots, put through the meat grinder and cook until tender in just as little water as possible. Cook the rind of the oranges cut in bits in water to cover until very tender; add to the cooked carrots. Add the pulp and juice of the oranges and four pounds of tender rhubarb unpeeled, cut in small pieces. Cook all together until the rhubarb is tender, then add seven cupfuls of sugar and cook until the mixture is thick. Seal in jelly glasses.

Tomato Succotash. Take two cupfuls of canned tomatoes, two tablespoonfuls of minced celery, one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, a dash of paprika, two cupfuls of cooked lima beans and two cupfuls of canned corn. Cook all together for a half hour. Four into a buttered baking dish, cover with thinly sliced bacon and brown the bacon in a hot oven or under the gas flame.

Practice Cheerfulness. There is no physician like cheerfulness thought for dissipating the ills of the body; there is no comforter to compare with good will for dispersing the shadows of grief and sorrow.—Allen.

Everyone needs something besides work and amusement. Come to the Michelson Memorial church next Sunday morning and think with others on the greatest subject on earth.

Holding it to be in conflict with the constitution of the United States, Attorney General Grosbeck in an opinion given out Friday, rules that the proposed amendment to the state constitution which would require all children between the ages of 5 and 16 to attend a public school, should not be placed on the ballot at the coming November election. This is the amendment proposed for the purpose of abolishing parochial schools in this state.

Some highwaymen have held up men and robbed them at Boyne Falls, Cheboygan and other places in that vicinity recently. At Boyne Falls when the victim of the robbery attempted to fight the thieves, they beat him up badly. Last week one of the highwaymen was caught in the vicinity of Gaylord by the State police and taken to Boyne Falls, where it was proven that he was the one who had robbed the citizen of that place. There are still three of these men at large.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Garrison arrived here last week from Nevada to spend the summer at Lake Margrethe. They had expected to make their home in Nevada but did not like the associations of cactus and sage bush and concluded to give it up. Mr. Garrison was in the employ of the Southern Pacific railroad. They own a cottage at Lake Margrethe but it was rented to Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Herron and, Mr. Garrison says, they won't be able to occupy it until August 1st. They like Grayling and are thinking of remaining here permanently.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Wisner of Holly and their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Johnston of Petoskey were pleasant visitors in Grayling last week. Mr. Wisner is the eldest son of the late A. H. Wisner, an old and highly respected resident of Crawford county, Grayling. He left Grayling about 30 years ago, so only the pioneer settlers remember them. Although it was so long ago they renewed many happy acquaintances during their brief stay here. A. H. Wisner, deceased, came to Crawford county in 1882, taking up a homestead at what was known then as Center plains. Ten years later he moved to Grayling, where he passed away in 1900.

The children of the Danish Lutheran Sunday school classes enjoyed their annual picnic at Lake Margrethe Wednesday. It was a splendid day and the merry-makers enjoyed rowing and bathing in the beautiful lake waters, as they have done for so many summers before. There was all kinds of good things to eat and an all-around good time was had by all. Some of the older folks went along to look after the younger children, and they enjoyed the occasion fully as much as the little folks.

A beautifully arranged luncheon was given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Frank Michelson assisted by Mrs. Oscar Hanson at the Michelson cottage at Lake Margrethe. The living and dining rooms were thrown together and the entire company of 45 ladies were arranged through the two rooms. The day was perfect and this added to the charm of the affair. After luncheon most of the guests played "500". Mrs. Holger Peterson, holding the highest score. Out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Lewis, Johannesburg; Mrs. Gallup, Boston; Miss Ryan, Jackson, and Mrs. Easton, Owosso.

Nels Corwin left last night for Detroit to drive back a new Ford auto.

Mrs. Geo. Holmes of Ypsilanti is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Rasmus Hanson.

Mrs. Brethower and children of Detroit are visiting her sister Mrs. Joan Lamotte and family this week.

Mrs. Cletus St. Pierre and two children returned home Wednesday from a visit with relatives in Bay City.

Mrs. James Brown and two children returned Saturday from a several weeks' visit with relatives at Augree, Mich.

Will the persons, who picked up the straw hats on the beach at Higgins Lake last Sunday kindly return them?

The Misses Bertha Peterson and Ruth Snyder of Sigma were here the week-end visitors at the John McCarthy home.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Gull of Pittsburg are enjoying a few days camping at Lake Margrethe and other neighboring resorts.

The Ladies of the W. B. A. O. T. M. with their husbands are enjoying a Wenerwurst roast at McIntyre's landing this afternoon.

Mrs. William Powell has as her guest at her cottage at Lake Margrethe, her daughter-in-law Mrs. Vera Lowell of Detroit.

Mrs. William Johnston and daughter Helen Margaret of Bay City are spending a few weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Snierman.

Miss Margaret Warren of Detroit came Wednesday, to spend a number of weeks visiting her grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Ironble.

Mrs. E. C. Mister of Baltimore, Maryland, arrived Friday and will spend some time at the home of her daughter and family, Mrs. C. M. Mount.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Allen, daughter Margaret and son Harry of Chicago are guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Woir and family at Lake Margrethe.

Amherst Merriman of Detroit, son of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Merriman of Detroit, Mich., formerly of Grayling, is spending a few days with friends in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Larson and children of Johannesburg motored here and are visiting Mrs. Larson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Petersen and other relatives.

Mrs. Carl Michelson and daughter Frances Jane joined Mr. Michelson at Lake Margrethe the latter part of the week and will spend the remainder of the summer at their cottage.

Mr. Chas. Gallup of Boston arrived Wednesday and is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Benke at Lake Margrethe. Mrs. Gallup has been a guest at the same cottage for some time.

Miss Grace Carpenter returned last night to her home in Uica, Mich., after an extended visit here. Miss Gerne Armstrong accompanied her cousin and after a visit in Uica will go to Detroit to spend some time.

Vivian, the little three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Riedge fell from a small express cart while at play early Tuesday evening and broke her right arm. She was taken to Mercy hospital where an X-ray was taken and the fracture reduced.

The AuSable river is being made a regular haunt for pleasure-seekers this season. Tuesday afternoon a party of ten young men from the southern part of the state started on a canoe trip down the river to Oude. Their provisions included 24 dozen of eggs and like quantities of everything else good to eat, so they are promising themselves a merry time. They launched their canoes on the stream that flows thru Leece's Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Schumann enjoyed a short call from former Grand Rapids friends Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. George Roders and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tillison and daughter Miss Agnes. They are on an auto outing tour, carrying their own camping outfit thus stopping wherever they please and remaining as long as they like. Their route will take them thru northern Michigan, Upper Peninsula and Wisconsin and home by way of Chicago.

About 35 ladies responded to an "at home" invitation from Mrs. A. C. Herbert Wolff to meet Mrs. A. C. Allen of Chicago, Wednesday. The ladies spent the afternoon playing "500". Mrs. Robert Gillett and Mrs. C. A. Canfield held the highest scores. A delicious lunch was served by the Misses Marjorie Wolff, Frances Jane Michelson, Lucille Hanson and Norvell Allen. Out-of-town guests with the guest of honor were Mrs. George Holmes, Ypsilanti, Mrs. Spencer Meistrup, Detroit, Miss Ryan, Jackson.

Mrs. Minnie Larson and Mr. John Benson were quietly united in marriage at the Danish Lutheran church Tuesday evening by its pastor, Rev. Kjolhede. The ceremony was solemnized at 8 and Miss Margaret Hemmingson and Mr. Walmer Jorgenson were the witnesses. Mr. and Mrs. Benson are residing at the cottage at Lake Margrethe for the summer where they are now at home. They are receiving congratulations and the best wishes of their many friends. Mr. Benson is one of our substantial and well liked business men. Both Mr. and Mrs. Benson are well and favorably known in Grayling. They have the best wishes of the Avalanche for a long and pleasant married life.

It was noted in the Avalanche recently that a wild bear was seen in Roscommon streets one day recently and at the time, as usual, there was no one around with a gun, and Bruno got away. Two of our citizens, one day last week, saw a line while fishing on the AuSable and just what to do was a puzzle. "Marlus said 'I will hold the boat if you will go after it.' 'Here goes,' said Charlie and made a strike that landed it. They placed it on exhibition at the Hatchery and of course Phil was impatient to take a look at it and upon investigation found it to be, instead of a really truly live fish, a couple of links out of a log chain. He was bound that he would get even and so when some of his friends accepted his invitation to come up and see it he marched them proudly to the corral and found, to his dismay, that someone had stolen it.

"I MUST STAY."

SYNOPSIS.—Alighting from a train at Denver a well-dressed traveler is familiarly accosted by a man about his own age. The traveler ignores the advance. A few minutes later he is greeted as "Will" by an elderly lady and gentleman, who stop their auto to speak. He imagines it a case of mistaken identity and announces himself as "Richard Clinton," on his way to the coast. The couple appear greatly surprised, and learning he is to be in town until midnight, the lady, introducing herself as Mrs. Kirkland, and her husband as Doctor Kirkland, invites him to dinner, explaining the action by his truly remarkable resemblance to a friend of theirs. He accepts. At the Kirkland home he meets a young lady who greets him as her fiancée. She is Ellen Kirkland, and plainly is greatly hurt by his assertion that he is "Richard Clinton." At dinner "Clinton" learns that his host is a medical specialist and that he is believed to be Will Lowrie, a young man who had been suffering from a nervous breakdown and had gone east for medical treatment. Lowrie had in his possession bonds of the value of $100,000, belonging to the bank where he was employed, which have disappeared and of which he has no recollection. With Doctor Kirkland "Clinton" goes to the Lowrie home, the doctor being satisfied that Amy Lowrie, Will's sister, will convince "Clinton" he is really Lowrie, suffering from loss of memory. Amy declares at once he is her brother, and insists on treating him as such, to his great embarrassment.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

"Is the whole town a pack of lunatics?" exclaimed Clinton, his blue eyes flashing. "I shall not go to a hotel. I will take my train tonight as I intended, and—"

"Oh, no, no," implored Ellen. "Surely you'll not desert us!"

"I will go on to California," he insisted. "There I shall send for proofs of my identity, and when I have finished my visit to the coast, I shall return here to convince you of my mistake."

"You shall not go!" declared Amy. "I must," he replied. "If I stay here, you and Miss Kirkland will persist in this delusion. Probably you'll soon hear that your brother is in the East or abroad. Imagine your anger at me when you learn that I am not he."

"Mr.—Clinton," said Mrs. Kirkland, "do you not realize that it will cause us much apprehension—anguish—if you go away while we still believe you to be Will?"

"It would be dishonorable of me to stay," he rejoined, and he started toward the door.

"I shall go and not return until I have the positive proofs of my identity to show you."

"Proofs of what you think you are? Oh! that means you'll never come back!" cried Ellen.

Amy slipped away and glided out into the room behind the parlor as Clinton took another step toward the hall door. Bemm set himself directly in the way.

"Hold on, old man," he advised. "As your friend, I know, I really can't let you go."

Clinton put out his hand to push him away. Bemm caught him by the wrist in a viselike grasp. Clinton's face went white; his eyes shone like sunlit ice. He spoke in a very low and quiet tone: "You fool. There are ladies present. Let go."

"Not unless you give me your word to stay and clear up about those bonds," replied Bemm.

Clinton made an attempt to wrest himself free. Bemm held him fast with unexpected strength. But he made the mistake of permitting a shade of irony to appear in his suave smile. The look in his prisoner's eyes warned him to guard himself. He flung up his right arm with the quickness of an expert boxer. Clinton was a fraction of a second quicker. His clenched left hand drove in over the upwaving arm and encountered Bemm's chin. Stunned by the blow, Bemm swayed backward and would have fallen heavily had not Clinton passed him to the floor.

Ellen uttered a stifled shriek. Clinton straightened up from beside the white-faced inert interloper and looked apologetically at the girl and her equally startled mother.

"Pray pardon me," he said. "Do not be alarmed. He'll be all right in a few moments. I could not stand for his laying hands on me."

"To think that you could have so forgotten yourself!" reproved Mrs. Kirkland.

"Was I to endure being treated as a thief?" he broke in. "I regret that he forced it upon me before yourself and your daughter. However, I shall now relieve you of my ungentlemanly presence."

"Oh, Will! No, no! Do not leave me!" implored Ellen.

Before he could reach the hall doorway Amy popped into it from the other side and outspread her arms to bar the way.

"You dear old silly," she bantered. "That's all the good it did you, knocking down poor Charlie boy. You can't run away. I've locked the front door, and I've hidden the key and your hat."

"Will Lowrie," she sternly replied, "will not permit even you to—"

"Growlly bear! Growlly bear!" she mocked.

He stepped toward her with the evident purpose of pushing past into the hall. She darted to meet him, and, before he could evade her, flung her arms about his neck. He grasped her wrists, but her fingers were locked fast. To have freed himself he must have resorted to outright violence.

"I—I—Miss Lowrie," he stammered, "really this is—most—"

"Promise!" she demanded, clinging tighter.

He looked down into her upturned face. The starlike brown eyes were soft with tender affection and bright with merry triumph. To gaze into them and remain stern was an impossibility.

"But I—"

"You must—else I'll never, never let go. You'll have to carry me around with you all the time, everywhere."

The embarrassment that had succeeded his sternness gave place in turn to a whimsical look. "I've a mind to take you at your word."

"You mean—?"

"Take you with me."

She released one hand to stroke his forehead. "Your poor head!" she soothed. "There! There!"

With a sudden return of irritation, he sought to draw himself free from her. She clung to him and again locked her fingers together.

"No, you don't," she exulted. "It's no use trying to escape. You've got to promise."

"I say, Miss Amy," murmured Bemm, eagerly sitting up, "if I should try to run off, would you—"

"I promise to remain until Doctor Kirkland comes," broke in Clinton.

"Oh, you will? And Charlie's not hurt?" exclaimed Ellen.

"That's a dear old brotherkins!" approved Amy in the same breath, and she rose on tiptoe with her smiling lips upturned for his brotherly salute.

Bemm sighed enviously. At the sight Clinton bent over the temptation. His lips came so near to the girl's that his mustache grazed the tip of her saucy nose. But instead of kissing her on the mouth, he put up his hand to lift her backflung head, and pressed his lips reverently to her broad white forehead.

"I say, now," remarked Bemm, "if that's not proof you're her brother—Miss Amy has only to say the word, and I shall be charmed to illustrate how one who is not a brother—"

The girl faced the others, leaning affectionately on Clinton's shoulder.

"Ellen dear, call Tillie to fetch a bucket of ice water. Poor Charlie Bemm is still off his head."

"I'm not," denied Bemm, rising a trifle unsteadily. "On the contrary, it was my head that came near being off me."

Mrs. Kirkland looked earnestly at Clinton. "May I suggest that an apology—" she began.

"From me!" flashed Bemm, with a heartiness that forestalled Clinton's frown. "Though I meant it as a friend, I should not have—er—resorted to physical persuasion."

"That is generous of you, Mr. Bemm," said Clinton.

"Well, you see, you persuaded me, instead," rallied Bemm. "You presented a deucedly effective argument."

"Oh, if Charlie takes it that way, Will," remarked Mrs. Kirkland, regarding Amy's sisterly cuddling with a wistful look. "But you'll never do such a shocking thing again, will you?"

"That depends," answered Clinton, a trifle dryly.

CHAPTER IV.

The Bear.

The muffled ring of the doorbell stirred Amy to agile activity. She bent down to thrust her fingertips into the side of one tiny slipper.

"Must be doctor!" she exclaimed. "Where in the world did that—Oh, there it is!" She straightened up, rosy cheeked, to flourish the key of the front door in Clinton's face. "Own up! You'd never have looked for it there—now would you?"

"Magic!" he declared. "You'll not pretend you really had that huge thing in one of those slippers!"

Her face clouded. "Oh, Will, for you to make such a compliment as that! It shows you can't remember I'm only your sister."

"Miss Lowrie," he replied, between amusement and exasperation, "if it were not for you, I would go at once. This continual insistence that I am not—"

"But doctor—he'll soon cure you!" she cried in joyful relief, and she darted into the hall, calling, "Wait, Tillie, I have the key. I'll let him in."

The lines of Clinton's firm mouth tightened. He confronted Doctor Kirkland, who came hastening in from the hall with one big plump hand on Amy's shoulder. The physician waved his other hand around the room and ordered genially: "Sit down. We'll talk this over like sensible people."

"I agreed to remain until you came, Doctor Kirkland," said Clinton, stiffly.

"He was going to run off and leave us!" announced Mrs. Kirkland.

"Leave?—tonight?" queried her husband. He eyed the would-be runaway attentively. "It was my understanding that you agreed to remain in Denver until—"

"Until I had sent on for proofs to convince you of my identity," broke in Clinton. "When I agreed to that I did not foresee how exasperating this absurd mistake would become."

"Exasperating?"

"Yes. Can none of you imagine how it seems to me? I come to Denver an absolute stranger to you all—"

"Oh, Will!" sighed Ellen.

Amy, suddenly full of concern, began stroking his forehead.

"You see!" he cried. "To sit here and let her—and I no more her brother than Mr. Bemm!"

"No, no," differed Bemm. "Miss Amy never offered to be a sister to me, I'm glad to say."

In spite of the girl's soothing fingers Clinton's forehead gathered in a frown. "This is no joke," he said. "It has gone far enough already. Every one of you seems so deluded that the only thing for me to do is to go on to California and not come back here until I have received proofs that must convince you."

"You are sure that you can furnish proofs?" asked Doctor Kirkland.

"Positive."

The physician gravely shook his head. "Complete case of dissociation," he observed. "Perfect instance of secondary personality. My dear boy, in the circumstances I cannot expect you to believe me. We must all seem, as you think, absolute strangers to you. Yet may I request you to listen seriously to what I have to say?"

Clinton looked at his watch, glanced around at the tense faces of Bemm and the ladies, and reluctantly acquiesced. "Very well, if you do not take too long, and if Miss Lowrie will kindly cease to—will take another seat."

"O-h!" murmured Amy, drawing away from him, deeply hurt.

"Can't you see?" he burst out. "To let you—most despicable of me!"

"But—but to think that you—!" sobbed the girl.

"My dear boy," said Doctor Kirkland, "try to be reasonable. As a mere question of probability, here are five of us believing that you are yourself—that is, Will Lowrie; while you alone—"

"But I know that I am not he; I know I am Richard Clinton."

"You mean you believe you know. You are not conscious of being other than what and who you think you are. May I ask if you have ever studied abnormal psychology?"

"Not studied; though I have some ideas—"

"Some? Good! If you have even the slightest idea of psychopathology you will know that anyone subject to amnesia, that is to say, loss of memory—"

"My memory, sir, is excellent."

"Oh, Will," reproached Ellen. "You say that when you do not even—"

"Leave him to me, daughter," interposed the physician, and he fixed his shrewd gaze on Clinton's angry face. "My dear boy, in many cases of amnesia the patient not only forgets his past life but also forgets that he has forgotten. This amounts to dissociation of the personality."

"This medical jargon, sir, is to say the least—"

"One moment, please. Have you recently met with a shock, such as that of a railway collision?"

"I was in a motor accident. But that was more than a year ago."

"Over a year ago," echoed Amy. "What a fabrication!"

"Please do not interrupt," admonished Doctor Kirkland. He nodded gravely to Clinton. "More than a year ago, you say? Was it a severe accident?"

"Only to the car. I was merely stunned."

"Knocked unconscious! H'm! That and the preceding psychopathic conditions—quite in line with the other cases reported."

"Doctor Kirkland," impatiently retorted Clinton, "certainly as I am of my present sanity, much more of this solemn twaddle will drive me mad."

"No, you need have no fear of that. Only you must be calm and reasonable. As you will understand how conditions such as yours develop if you will kindly permit me to explain about the peculiarities of amnesia—the peculiar results of the loss of the time memory, combined with the frequently associated phenomena resultant in dissociation, hallucinations—"

"All of you are subject to hallucinations when you mistake me for that Will Lowrie!" hotly declared Clinton.

"Now, now, my dear boy; be calm," soothed the physician. "This excitement—"

Clinton sprang up, his blue eyes flashing with anger. "Enough, sir! I shall at once return to the station. As I have agreed to send on for proofs of my identity I shall do so. They will be mailed direct to you. In the meantime you can telegraph to your missing friend or to those who have charge of him. But I will stay here no longer."

The cold anger and determination of the young man's tone struck speechless even the physician and the denair Bemm. Ellen looked helplessly from her father to her equally mute mother. The hush that had fallen upon them was broken by the quiet voice of Amy, asking in a matter-of-fact tone: "When did you say your train leaves?"

"Shortly before midnight," answered Clinton, frowning at Bemm.

"It's pretty late in the day to get a berth," remarked the girl. "But if they're all taken I suppose you can sleep in the smoking room."

"I have a stateroom engaged through to the coast," explained Clinton, his voice softening, though he continued to frown at Bemm.

Amy smiled across at Ellen, and answered artlessly: "Of course, you

"I shall at once return to the station."

old stupid. But I shall need the stateroom; so unless you have luck—"

"Really, Miss Lowrie, I fail to understand—"

"Didn't I call you an old stupid? You say you won't stay. Well, then, I am going along with you."

"But—but, Miss Lowrie, I cannot—"

"Perhaps you can't," she said, smilingly declared the girl.

Clinton turned appealingly to Dr. Kirkland. "This is—it cannot be permitted! Surely you'll not allow her! Send for her mother!"

"There isn't time," said the girl. "Anyway mamma never would forgive me if I let you go off alone."

"Good heavens! You really mean to—to—"

"Of course. You simply must have someone to take care of you till you come to your senses."

He wiped the perspiration from his forehead. "If only I could make you realize—to let you go would be impossible. I must stay."

"Two darlings—my fiancée and my little sister!"

PIFFLE FOR CALLOW YOUTH

Advice Handed Out by Successful Business Men Is to Use a Siang Phras, Bunk.

A successful lumber merchant has been giving a newspaper interviewer a few of the mental wrinkles that influenced him in the making of money. Here are some of them:

"If your initials spell a word it means you will be rich."

"If, on the other hand, you mend a garment while wearing it, you will always be poor."

"If your right hand itches it is a sign that you will receive money. If your left hand itches you will spend it. This is because right begins with R and R stands for receive, while L stands for let go."

"When you see a shooting star you should say 'money.' As many times as you are able to say the word during the fall of the star, so many extra dollars will you have in your pocket as a result."

Helpful words, aren't they? Well, they are no better and no worse than the bulk of the talk handed out by successful men for the guidance of their fellows—that is, in the matter of making money. The rich or successful business man doesn't disclose his real secrets—if he has any—though he often attends club luncheons or dinners and makes a speech pretending to do so.—Philadelphia Record.

Curious Fatigue Test.

A unique method has been discovered to measure just how tired one's body becomes after hours of work. A line is drawn across the forearm, with a sharp point, not sharp enough to break the skin, but only to drive out the blood and leave a straight white line on the skin. An observer holding a stop watch measures the time it takes for the blood to rush back into the skin and the white line to fade. The exact number of seconds and fraction of a second is recorded. This test is repeated say at intervals of one hour all day until the working hours are over. When these readings are plotted on paper a curve is drawn which tells at a glance just how one's energy ebbs throughout the day. There is always a marked jump in the line after lunch hour.—Boys' Life.

Mrs. Daisy Erd is the only woman commander of an American Legion post in the United States. Mrs. Erd was "unlapped" in the act of planting a tree in the Charlestown (Mass.) navy yard during Legion services.

DUTY OF EX-SERVICE BOYS

They Should Assist in Maintenance of Law and Order, Says National Adjutant.

For the benefit of the comparatively few isolated communities in which there is noticeable a tendency to give credence to misinformation emanating chiefly from the ranks of alien agitators and other enemies of 100 per cent Americanism, it is deemed advisable to refer to an editorial in the Chronicle, Cincinnati, O., official organ of the Ohio Central Labor Council and "Local voice of the American Federation of Labor."

In its issue of May 29, 1920, this publication quotes the preamble to the constitution of the American Legion, and adds:

"The above is the preamble to the constitution of the American Legion and to our minds it certainly sets forth a principle that every true American, whether he be a world war veteran or not, can consistently subscribe to."

"Recently an international officer, returning from a state conference to Cincinnati gave vent to the expression that the members of his international union would not be allowed to join the American Legion. This to our mind is baby play. The attitude of the American Legion toward organized labor in the state of Ohio, and locally as well, has been clearly defined and has been approved of by the Central Labor council. It is claimed that at least 40 per cent of the boys who went to France and across the water were trade unionists. If this is true, then the proper thing for them to do would be to join the American Legion, and if ever the occasion arose when there would be a criticism of the labor movement, they could be of service by explaining our real purposes, thereby eliminating some of the antagonisms to us which comes from misunderstanding. There need be no fear by trade unionists of the American Legion, and as we said above, we would recommend to every trade unionist who is eligible to membership that he can best protect his interest and the wage earner by getting in line, and place himself where he properly belongs."

In this connection, the following excerpts from a recent letter of Franklin D'Oiler, the Legion's national commander, to Thomas Golding, state adjutant of New Jersey, appear appropriate:

"The American Legion has taken a very positive stand that, as an organization, it should never take any definite part in any dispute between the employer and the employee, or between capital and labor. This policy should be adhered to strictly by the national organization, state organizations and by the posts as well."

"In any such controversy, the interest of the Legion is confined to that of the maintenance of law and order and without taking part on either side, in case the situation should arise where life and property are endangered, it is the duty of a member of the American Legion to perform his full duty as a citizen, according to his own conscience and his own understanding. Because of his military service, the ex-serviceman has a very keen sense of his responsibility as a citizen, and I am quite confident that he will always be alive to this responsibility. Therefore, in case of a contingency, as above outlined, it is his duty to assist in the maintenance of law and order, by being an individual and offering his services to the duly constituted authority for the maintenance of law and order."

"There is nothing to prevent the individual members of the American Legion from being very particular."

The girl had been sent down to the brook to fetch a pail of water, but stood gazing at the flowing stream, apparently lost in thought.

"What's she waiting for?" said her mistress, who was watching.

"Dunno," she replied. "She's waiting for a pail of water."

"That's all right. She's waiting for a pail of water."

"That's all right. She's waiting for a pail of water."

SEEK NAMES OF NEXT OF KIN

Community Posts to Ascertain Addresses of Those Expecting Bodies to Be Sent Home.

While the American Legion is trying to perfect arrangements with the war department to assist in assuring relatives of prompt notification following the arrival of remains of America's soldier dead from overseas, work has reached national headquarters of the Legion that a body of one of these heroes recently lay unclaimed on a Hoboken pier for nearly a week with the next of kin totally ignorant of its arrival.

According to members of a Legion post in the fallen soldier's home community, no notification of the body's arrival was sent to relatives by the war department. The Legionnaires, it is said, learned of the case through indirect channels and telegraphed department headquarters of the Legion in New York city, which arranged for shipment of the body to its final resting place. The Legion post took charge of the funeral and the remains were interred with appropriate military honors.

When the plan to return certain bodies from overseas was first announced, the American Legion endeavored to make arrangements with the war department to receive notification of shipment in order that national headquarters of the Legion might write direct to the next of kin and offer the services of the local posts in assisting with the funeral arrangements in case relatives desired this. But the government officials decided they could not give out this information and compromised with an offer to circulate the next of kin to the effect that the Legion would be glad to co-operate in extending honor to the memory of these heroes.

In a bulletin forwarded to each of the more than 9,000 Legion posts throughout the United States, Lemuel Bolles, national adjutant, asks these community posts to ascertain the names of men of their respective localities who died overseas and whose bodies are being returned, and notify Legion national headquarters of the names and addresses of the next of kin, in order that it may take steps to prevent, if possible

STIMULANTS

A STIMULANT is something which people take to increase their voltage. Some people have a little natural voltage that they have to fire up on stimulants about five nights a week, after which they are able to get home with the aid of a pocket fence and nineteen telephone poles.

There are several kinds of stimulants, all of which serve a useful purpose. The old-fashioned stimulant known as a sound spanking has kept more boys out of the reform school than all the moral precepts of the ages. The moral precept is all right, but it does not seem to reach the spot with so much thoroughness as a conscientious spanking mixed with short, bristling words of admonition. Many a boy has been stimulated into giving up profanity after his mother has rinsed out his mouth with wood ashes.

Nearly all stimulants have the faculty of giving out at a critical juncture and demanding more rope. Where one man limits himself to three cigars a day, a thousand nuke way with twenty and top off with four pipeful before retiring. When the family physician feeds morphine to sciatric rheumatism, the patient usually recovers just in time to invest in a hypodermic needle. The boy who goes the beer route is lucky if he doesn't wind up on lemon extract. Stimu-

captain of industry, and the more they are abused the harder they sting. Tobacco, tea, coffee and malt extract are stimulants which should be driven with a high check. Nevertheless, it is a sad fact that thousands of people who have always smoked a cob pipe and drank coffee made in a lye bucket have been cut off in their 103rd year and caused the relatives to ask for that familiar hymn, "Would Not Live Always."

Beauty Chats

By EDNA KENT FORBES

EXERCISE FOR BEAUTY

MOST WOMEN prefer coffee in bed and a hot bath to a series of exercises and a cold shower. Women are like cats in this respect, that they hate cold and avoid anything strenuous.

The result is that few of them get enough of the sort of exercise they need. One woman to whom I wrote advising fifteen minutes of exercise every morning, replied indignantly that keeping a six-room house and running two children was all the exercise she needed! But it never occurred to her that doing household tasks after a set rule made it all the more necessary for her to do some sort of gymnastics bringing other motions into play.

A little daily exercise will increase one's beauty and health.

The housewife ought to study out the sort of motions she does most frequently in her work, and take exercises that will benefit other sets of muscles. Stenographers and office workers need exercises for developing the chest, overcoming rounded shoulders and developing the legs, since their work is sitting and bending. Girls who work at machines go through one set of motions over and over, should pick exercises to use other parts of their body, lest they, too, grow one-sided in development.

Workers and idlers alike need physical exercising, based on scientific study. Fifteen minutes a day is ample, and includes the time for the bath. The result will be greater efficiency, longer youth, better looks and greater vitality.

SLAIN BRIDE'S HUSBAND TAKEN

FORMALLY SLATED AFTER LONG GRILLING; PROTESTS INNO-CENCE; IS UNMOVED.

HIS STORY BEING INVESTIGATED

Girl Was 19; Her Desire to Return to England Reported Cause of Quarrels.

Following a grilling of more than an hour by the police, Michael Greeson, 20-year-old husband of Mrs. Lillian Greeson, who was found murdered in her room, 492 West Forest avenue, early last Monday, formally was taken to the police headquarters, his name written on the police blotter and a charge of murder entered after it.

Through the long questioning Greeson is understood to have steadfastly denied any knowledge of the killing of his 19-year-old bride of three months. He maintained that he had been at the home of his brother through Sunday night and early Monday. This statement was supported by the brother, Morris Greeson, when questioned by the detectives earlier.

At no time during the grilling did Greeson break down. He maintained a calm and unshaken attitude and showed no emotion when taken to a cell in central station. His natty attire was in keeping with the manner in which he met the charges put forth by the detectives, at all times replying in a low, even tone of voice.

Mrs. Greeson was found lying on her bed, her groans having attracted the attention of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Miller, who occupy the residence. She was taken to Receiving hospital, about 2:30 o'clock, but spoke no word, having failed to regain consciousness. She and Greeson had been married only three months. The ceremony took place in England, and she came here with her husband April 19.

Greeson, employed by the Detroit Automatic Scale company, was not with his wife Sunday night, according to his fragmentary conversation with the police after they had found him with his brother, Morris, 2633 Jefferson avenue. He admitted that he and his wife had quarreled frequently during the last several weeks, and this is supported, the police say, by the statements of others who make their home with the Miller family.

Michael Greeson said he spent all Sunday with his brother because the latter had been suffering from rheumatism. The two men, when found by the police, were playing checkers. Michael showed no lack of composure when detectives asked him to accompany them to police headquarters, but asked to be shown a warrant. No weapon was found either at the place where Mrs. Greeson roomed nor at the home of Morris Greeson.

HOLDUP DRAWS LONG SENTENCE

Ten to 20 Years, Term of 36th Bandit Sent to Prison.

Julius Maier, 28, convicted of robbery while armed, was sentenced to from 10 to 20 years in Jackson prison last Monday, Judge Keldan recommending 15 years.

Maier held up George Winters, an agent for the Blue Valley Creamery company, in the store of William Schwanitz, 716 DuBois street, December 23, 1919. Winters said that three men were engaged in the hold-up and that Maier and another were armed. Maier declared that he was playing cards in a Grand River avenue cigar store at the time of the robbery. He is the thirty-sixth bandit sentenced by Judge Keldan, most of whom have been convicted in his court. Assistant Prosecutor William Quaine representing the people in every case.

453 DIVORCES IN TWO WEEKS

Chicago Judge Ordered to Clean Up Calendar, Does It.

Chicago—Judge Frank Johnston, Jr., believes he has established a record in the granting of divorce decrees in the circuit court here. He has been hearing divorces two weeks and last Saturday he signed his four hundred and fifty-third decree.

He was assigned to this branch of the circuit court with instructions to clean up the badly clogged calendar. He heard nothing but divorce cases, signing decrees during the noon recess, before court convened in the morning and after adjournment in the evening. All the cases he heard were uncontested and he was able to handle them quickly.

Dry Season Perils Panama Shipping. Washington.—Dependent entirely upon the water from rains of the wet season gathered in the great storage reservoir of Gatun lake for its operation, the Panama canal was brought down to a narrow margin of supply by the unprecedentedly dry season just ended. Official reports show that the lake's at one time was reduced to within less than a yard of the point where there would not have been sufficient water for safe navigation.

POLICE MESSAGES HAVE RIGHT OF WAY

TELEPHONE COMPANY RECOGNIZES EMERGENCY NATURE OF CALLS FOR STATE TROOPERS.

An arrangement has been made by the State Police with the Michigan State Telephone Company whereby messages to or from the State Police stations are given right of way over other traffic. This is necessary because it is important that the State Police receive notification promptly of robberies and other crimes so that they may start in pursuit of the law-breakers without delay. In other cases, a call in sent in where some disorder or act of lawlessness is feared and there have been scores of cases where such a call resulted in bringing the State Police to the scene in time to avert trouble.

Major Roy C. Vandercook, who recently retired from the command of the state troopers, perfected a system for use on the regular patrol routes of the State Police whereby farmers and storekeepers may notify either the nearest State Police station or the trooper on the patrol of the presence of suspicious characters or of other facts which are essential that the troopers know.

The fact that many instances have occurred of criminals using motor cars in committing their depredations in the agricultural districts has made the telephone an important adjunct in helping the state troopers to take preventive measures and to head off escaping law-breakers.

ROTARIANS GIVE PRAISE TO STATE'S CONSTABULARY

YPSILANTI EDITOR TELLS WHY MICHIGAN NEEDS A TRAINED FORCE TO PRESERVE LAW.

In Ypsilanti the Rotarians get out a little paper called "The Rotary Truth-teller." The other day the Michigan State Police came in for its share of comment in the editorial columns of this snappy publication. The general tone of the editorial is so refreshing that it is reprinted here in full. It is only a typical example of the opinion which thinking business men of Michigan have of the State Police. The editorial is as follows:

"The best argument for a State Police is that some people don't want 'em."

"The radical labor-unionist who expects to start the customary rough house this summer is disturbed at the thought of having a husky fellow with the big stick and the business-like manner standing around in his way. He prefers arson, thuggery and murder. He doesn't believe in the State Police, the National Guard, law, decency, or God."

"What he wants is a comfortable brand of politician-sheriffs and tin-star deputies sitting around the courthouse swapping stories."

"The honest citizen who is opposed to the State Police idea because he is afraid it may cost something finds himself with strange bed-fellows."

"The farmer who thinks he is not getting any protection from the State Police needs to yell for more of them instead of holding a prayer-meeting with the thugs, bootleggers and I. W. W.'s."

PROMPTNESS STOPS FIRE WHICH THREATENED WOODS

Captain C. E. Wakeman received a call from District Forest and Game Warden Crow the other day and Troopers Cooney and Cole were sent to his assistance. They found a fire raging which had been caused by a passing train, and before it could be extinguished it had burned over twelve acres in East Bay township, Grand Traverse county. This fire would have proven a most expensive one had it not been subdued immediately, owing to the fact that there was a strong wind from the southwest which headed the flames directly towards a nice stand of second-growth pine covering more than thirty-five acres. The flames had reached the very edge of this timber when the fire was placed under control. From now on much of the attention of the State Police will be directed to fighting such fires which break out every year.

PRESENCE OF TROOPERS CHECKS TIDE OF CRIME

During the past few months the large white frame house at Hudson, which is used for the headquarters of the State Police detachment located there, has been the scene of much activity. The constabulary was appealed to after a bandit band operating out of Toledo had tormented the vicinity for some time. Several towns had been raided by these outlaws, and after a series of farm robberies at Deerfield, Holloway, Addison and Rockford, Corp. Doty and three troopers were sent to Hudson. They took up their quarters in this roomy white frame house and since that time there has not been a single robbery. Further to safeguard the community 28 citizens of Hudson were recently sworn in as special deputies.

NEW BOOK

By Stock and Poultry Expert.

A new book entitled "Care and Treatment of Stock and Poultry" has just been published by Dr. L. D. LeGear, notable Veterinary Surgeon, who graduated from the Toronto, Ontario, Veterinary College 27 years ago, and has since devoted his entire life to Veterinary Science and Poultry Husbandry. This book contains 128 pages of up-to-the-minute data on the care, symptoms and treatment of stock and poultry. It is divided into departments—horses, hogs, cattle, sheep and poultry being taken up. It is very complete with charts and illustrations, and is a book that should be in the home of every live stock and poultry raiser in the country. The price is only 10 cents. Get it from your dealer or send a dime to Dr. L. D. LeGear, 1700 North Broadway, St. Louis, Mo., stating that you are a subscriber to this paper and he will send you a copy direct. Adv.

Mexican Sacrificial Stone.

The sacrificial stone was the stone on which human victims were sacrificed, before the war god Huitzilopochtli. In the principal Aztec temple in Mexico it was dug up near the site of the temple in 1791, and is now in the Mexican national museum. The stone is disk shaped, 8 3/5 feet in diameter and 2 1/2 feet thick. The sides are covered with elaborate sculptures.

GOITRE.

Reduced for This Ann Arbor Lady By External Home Remedy.

Note: It would be illegal to publish these statements if they were not true.

Mrs. Wm. Stewart, 703 Spring St., Ann Arbor, Mich., says in her own home paper, The Ann Arbor Times-News: "I had a lump on my neck the size of a large egg and as hard as a rock. I doctored it for five years and it kept getting larger. I have used one-half bottle of Sorbol Quadruple, and it has reduced more than half. I noticed it getting smaller the second day. You can use my testimony any time you wish. I think all goitre sufferers should know about Sorbol Quadruple."

Sorbol Quadruple comes in small bottles containing enough for most cases. It will not stain or irritate. Does not interfere with daily work. Leaves the parts in healthful normal condition. Requires ten minutes daily.
